

Since the introduction of ATMs nearly 60 years ago, these self-service devices have revolutionised retail banking; from how financial institutions interact with customers, to the evolution of technology and payments. As the payments industry has continued to grow and develop, the potential of the ATM has grown from a simple cash dispenser to a multipurpose self-service device. ATMs can now offer a full range of banking services from bill pay to issuing virtual cards and are essentially stand-alone self-service bank branches.

As the only channel that allows an FI to directly interact with their competitors' customers, ATMs offer an opportunity for FIs to really differentiate themselves through value added services. However, this channel is one of the most innovative and often under-utilised in terms of the potential services it can offer cardholders.

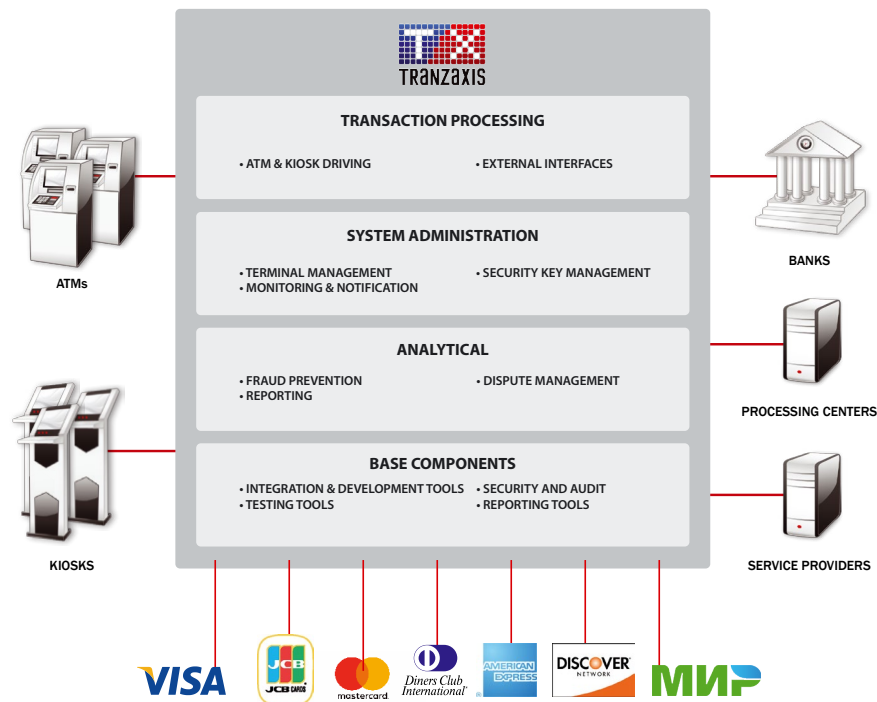

The TranzAxis ATM Management solution can help financial institutions turn a network of cash dispensers into a secure, lucrative customer relationship tool offering an extensive set of services, maximising customer retention through the provision of a compelling user experience.
